Lima is not only the largest but is the most important city of all, and is justly celebrated as the Paris of America. It is located about 8 miles from Callao, with which port it is closely connected by electric cars that run ev-ery five minutes, and by two railroads. The city is said to contain 126 Catho-

Other buildings worthy of mention are the Government Palace, National library, museum, mint, post and telegraph office, and the National Club headquarters. For the second February meeting of the Norwich Round Table, held Tuesday evening with Miss Jennie L. Condon as hostess at her home on Otis street, a particular feature of interest for the large number attending was for the large number attending was the reading of a letter from one of the former members, Luther K. Zabriskie, now assistant to the United States consul at Callao, Peru. As South America is the general topic for the Round Table this year, the letter direct from that field and written by one who had been a valued member of the club made a contribution of unusual interest. A vote of thanks was directed to be sent to the writer.

The meeting opened with the roll call to which the responses were made by telling of some curious things seen in South America. This was followed by well written papers as follows: The Christ of The Andes, Mrs. William P. Potter: Cape Horn and the Straits of Magellan, Mrs. John E. Fanning; Roraimer and Kaiteur, Mrs. H. J. American Consulate-General, Callao, Peru, Jan. 15, 1913. Dear Friends of the Norwich Round

Two years have already gone down into the ages since I bade good-bye to the friends and associates of my hap-piest days, made my last journey over the Preston hills, and took train from the "Rose of New England" in my start for this far distant clime. They have proved to be two years fraught with much hard work, yet with many enjoyments and much that was profitable. Most of all, during this period, South America, and more especially Peru, has come to mean to me vastly more than a more paragonish world's more than a mere name on the world's map. It has become a living reality, with a wonderfully interesting past and, if all the signs of the times are correct, possessing a future whose importance is even now impressing itself upon the world at large.

It affords me great pleasure to com-ply with the kind invitation of the Program Committee of the Round Table Club and present to you in this communication such first hand notes and comments regarding the "Land of the Incas" as thought might prove of Ophir of the Occident. An early historian of the days of the Spanish Conquest has styled Peru as "the Ophir of the Occident", and such a name appears signally appropriate. Prescott, in his description of the capital of the Republic, wrote "Amidst the woe and destruction which Pizarro and his followers brought on the devoted land of the Incas, Lima, the beautiful City of the Kings, Elma, the beautiful City of the Kings, still survives as the most glorious work of his creation the fairest gem on the shores of the Pacific." The eulogy is deserved, since its renowned cathedral, founded in the year 1525 by Francisco Pizarro, whose remains it made today the University. emains it guards today, the University of San Marcos, the oldest in the New World, its numberless churches and convents, its marvellously beautiful private dwellings, with their exquisite carvings, and its quaint blend of the ancient, the mediaeval, and the mod ern, all unite in rendering Lima justly famous among the cities of the world The surrounding territory is of untole antiquity, rich in wonderful traditions and fascinating remance, and is in relity comparable to the fabled land of the East which afforded King Solomous many luxuries. Indeed, eminen writers and students of the records ancient times maintain that the relevance of the records. ancient times maintain that the celebrated Ophir of the Bible and Peru the olden days were one and the sam and that its earliest founder were none other than the adventurous Phoenicians who did so much toward spreading civilization everywhere.

A Mighty Race. However this may be, it is quite cer-tain that, many ages before Colombus made his voyage of discovery to the New Werld in 1492, and centuries, even previous to the establishment of their remarkable empire by the Incas, whom the Conquistadores, under the lead of Plyarro and Almagro, confronted in 1532, there was a mighty race, or suc-cession of races, that dwelt in Peru, whose dominion extended at one time over the greater part of South America From time immemorial the name of Peru has suggested wealth unbounded, and, if the early chroniclers are to be and, it the early chroniclers are to be credited, in the pre-Hispanic days gold was but a household untensil, preferred solely for its beauty and adaptability. "Even," says the Inca Garcilasso, "the pots, and pans and kitchen vessels were of gold and plate." On all hands were of gold and plate." On all hands the precious metal glittered and shone, unvalued ecept for its brightness by the simple natives, for whom money was not yet a need.

The Inca Empire is but a distant memory now, as are the days of the Spanish possesion, yet similar conditions hold to what they were then. The same lust for wealth that characterized their predecessors has been noted in foreigners and natives alike. terized their predecessors has been noted in foreigners and natives alike, ever since the Republic was proclaimed in July, 1821, and these have carried on wholesale pillagings. Nevertheless, Peru is still regarded as a wealthy country, of untold possibilities, and what effect the opening of the and what effect the opening of the Panama Canal will have on its devel-opment remains to be seen.

make me to review past joys and often tempt me to lament the chance that has brought about this separation. The work that falls to my lot, moreover, is one of labor, yet it is of a pleasant nature, and, because of the satisfaction and pride I experience in being a servant of Uncle Sam, it becomes a labor of love, and with the hope of a "well-done," and the happy anticipations of a joyful home-going in due course of time, I bend to my task with renewed vigor. Therefore, with never a faltering look behind, but confident for the future, I reflect upon the advice of "Marse Henry" Watterson to the democrats in the days of the first Bryan campaign, and do, as he enjoined them to do, my "hornswaggledest,"— LETTER FROM PERU TO ROUND TABLE

FARRANT—In Norwich, Feb. 25, 1912, Nicholas Tarrant, aged 59 years. Funeral from his fate home, 210 Broadway Thursday morning at 8.30, Requiem mass in St. Patrick's church at 9 o'clock. Burial in St. Mary's cemetery.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

At a special meeting of the Directors of the Director of the Loss of our associate, Nicholas Tarrant, who recame a Director May 12, 1886.

From that time he took an untiring and unceasing interest in the welfare of the bank; and, until compelled by failing health to give up active business, he was seldom absent from the weekly meetings.

Independent and fearless in his convictions, and with a remarkably thorough knowledge of real estate, his independent was of much value; and the loss of his presence and advice will be teenly felt.

As an expression of respect for our

As an expression of respect for our ate associate and of sympathy for his amily, the bank shall be closed during he funeral and the Directors will attend the services in a body.

This minute shall be spread upon the cords of the bank and a copy sent to be family.
